Granada gave Lawrence suspects £2,000 holiday

THE five youths suspected of murdering Stephen Lawrence received a holiday worth at least £2,000 from the television company that gave them primetime exposure.

The racist gang enjoyed a 15-day break at Hennhill House, a well-appointed farmhouse south of Perth, where they played golf and football and watched satellite television.

The revelation appears to 29 assurances given by Granada, the maker of ITV's current affairs programme Tonight with Trevor McDonald, that the youths would not benefit in any way from the interview.

In a further blow to the programme, Scotland Yard was 30 to confirm claims by Granada that the holiday had been organised on the suggestion of the police, who were concerned about public order.
